IWM – Clause 56.07 and beyond

Friday 16 November 2012

The State Government has committed to applying the current approach to stormwater management in residential subdivisions more broadly to other types of subdivision. This is in response to the Living Melbourne, Living Victoria Implementation Plan released earlier this year.

Clearwater's Hot Topics session provides a unique opportunity for practitioners to discuss how Clause 56.07 is currently being implemented and to inform how any extension of the clause to other zones is approached.

This half-day event will enable facilitated peer-to-peer discussion on the topic and feature an expert Panel including representatives from State Government who will be available to answer questions and deliver short presentations.

As an attendee you will;

- Hear first-hand from the Office of Living Victoria on the next steps
- Hear case studies directly from developers where the implementation of Clause 56.07-4 has enhanced liveability for new communities
- Learn how design and implementation challenges have been overcome
- Constructively discuss how any extension of similar Clause provisions to other types of subdivision may be approached

Audience:

Ideal for anyone who is involved in the planning or design of integrated water management for urban development, and the implementation of the Clause 56.07-4 in particular.
